PROHIBITION COULD NOT BE ENFORCED—THEY SAID

With the strong arm of the government under war time provisions and rationing of sugar, gasoline, tires, automobiles, and enforcement of price freezing all under certain police powers, you will recall about the first argument in the New Deal campaign more than eight years ago was that—Prohibition cannot be enforced and should be repealed. You will also recall that prohibition was wiped out by the New Deal and one of the early White House social events was a beer party.

Contrasting World War Number One with Number Two and Woodrow Wilson wiped out liquor almost in a single stroke as a moral necessity as well as economic means of aiding in winning the then conflict with Germany and her allies.

This week a small but interesting gathering took place in Washington when a number of congressmen and senators met at dinner to discuss the advisability of demanding legislation that would stop the sale of liquor in and around camps where soldiers were quartered. This issue has been before the public before but it lacked support of both the navy and army leaders as well as the cabinet members that head these branches of the government. The White House has been silent on the issue.

Today under governmental edict business had prices frozen which means business must conform to the demands or suffer the penalty of being closed up. Meantime not a word has been said about regulating the sale of liquor even to the men in service camps or regulating the business in any way. If you have cuffs on your new pants you are a slacker. The sale of a nightshirt must be under government orders but the sale of liquor is unimportant to the welfare of the nation even in war time. Yet from the same source of control, which the nation accepts, we hear the old story—Prohibition cannot be enforced.

U. S. A. REPUBLIC, NOT A DEMOCRACY

We find an interesting article in the May 13 issue of the Congressional Record on a subject we have frequently referred to in this column and that is the United States is a Republic and not a Democracy.

The attention of Congress was called to this matter by Cong. Bennett, Missouri, who recites that Washington in the first Constitutional Convention, stated a republic had been created and not a democracy. He called attention to members in referring to "a democracy," which was in error.

He described a republic as a government where the sovereignty resides in the citizens, and is exercised through representatives chosen by citizens; while a democracy is a government where the sovereignty also resides in the citizens, but is exercised directly, without intervention of representatives.

"The United States is a government of laws, and not a government of men. A pure democracy is a government of men, ruled by the decisions of the majority in all things.

"A republic has a written constitution which places checks and balances upon all three branches of government; legislative, executive and judicial. The constitution is the supreme law adopted by the people for the protection of all.

"In a pure democracy the will of the majority is the law whether it refers to man's relationship with man or his relationship with God and religion. The majority rules all men in all things without checks and balances, and without limitation on legislative power. Whoever would legislate without regard to the constitution does, of necessity, fly to anarchy or despotism.

Bennett also called attention of newspapers and radio commentators in referring "to the fight of the democracies against the Axis Powers. He asked: "Would it not be better to speak of the United Nations opposing the Axis Powers? I know of no democracy that is fighting the Axis Powers."

HERALD WANT AND SALE ADS PAY

A traveling salesman stopped in town Monday to inquire about a former industry, he having been transferred to western territory due to the gasoline situation in the east. Although thousands have been granted gasoline for driving across of thousands will not get enough to travel across some of the Eastern cities to do shopping. He reports retail trade already has felt the reduction of gasoline and thousands of clerks would of necessity have to be laid off in the stores. The stores with a heavy overhead will feel the pinch more than smaller stores in the urban towns.

School authorities as well as state officials in a score of states are wondering where they will be if the situation lasts any length of time. In nearly every state some part of school funds comes from the gasoline tax and sales taxes. With the sale of gasoline cut short and retail sales of all lines of merchandise dropping just where will the revenue come from to carry on as in the past? In Ohio Governor Bricker was looking far ahead of the Democratic politicians that campaigned in the cities for a division of the state surplus. The Governor saw what was coming and took a stand, unpopular it was then, to hold the surplus for the "rainy day" that was inevitable. This state will have school funds for many months by protecting the state surplus while other states continued the New Deal spending program and now wonder where funds will come from to open their schools this coming fall. Should gasoline rationing hit Ohio, the state would lose millions in gas tax as well as sales taxes and eventually the "surplus" will be used up. Why states that have gasoline should be rationed is causing much public comment and Congress may have to act. Florida is said to have plenty of gasoline according to Gov. Holland and wants out from under the federal order.

Corn and hog farmers should follow newspaper reports this week of the discussion in Congress, especially the Senate, over the AAA appropriation bill. More than a few dollars "free filler" is at stake in the fight to give farmers a fair share of profit along with war industry and organized labor. Political party lines do not figure in the debate. It is New Deal backers against farmers for the opposition speaks for the administration. After hours of debate a compromise was proposed by Sen. Russell, Ga., for the administration which would permit government sale of wheat for feed purposes at 85 per cent of parity on corn or about 85¢ a bushel. Most of this wheat is old and said to be unfit for milling. Senators from the corn states saw the trick and at once charged the corn farmers were to be sacrificed as lower corn prices followed with lower prices for hogs. Sen. Gillett, Dem., Iowa, charged the compromise was but window dressing to beat down the corn farmer's income, while cotton, rice and tobacco could not be sold below parity.

Sen. Thomas, D., Okla., said the bill was a rope with two nooses, one for the corn farmer and one for the wheat farmer. Chairman Ed Smith, D., S. C., stated he had long opposed the present crop plan because it came from "downtown bureaucrats," and added that he feared the "chickens had come home to roost." Send corn prices down and down go beef and dairy products. Sen. Lucas, D., Ill., joined against the bill. Sen. Willis, Rep., Ind., charged the administration was attempting another method to "make a political football out of the farmers."

Using the farmers as a political football on the grain issue is as nothing as to what will happen under Paul McNutt's plan of controlling all labor. In as much as McNutt stands by the AFL and CIO leaders on demands, the farmer has yet to face a more serious situation. He should read for the future, not today.

Those who preach the New Deal doctrine and did not take their families to Dayton several days ago to see a famous stage star dancer, are not following closely the ideals of Mrs. FDR, who sponsored this artist for a place on a government war board to instruct the nation's youth in her style of dancing. The proposal made such an explosion in church and even political circles it was not long until the First Lady resigned her place only to be followed by Mayor LaGuardia. No doubt the whole idea was stage propaganda and we hear it was a fine thing for the theatre box office. The boys that always sit on the first three rows when dancing artists are billed say they had their money's worth. They are the real critics of what is "art and what is not art."

The South Charleston Community Club takes a fling at the rationing authorities. Some time ago an office was set up in that village so that residents would not have to drive fifteen or twenty miles to get a sugar book, thus saving tires and gasoline. Office furniture had been purchased and shipped to South Charleston and

The Garand semi-automatic rifle, which is the standard issue today for the U. S. Army, is superior to the old Springfield rifle in many respects. We literally need millions of these fast shooting powerful rifles to equip our army. They cost $98 each and are being manufactured at the rate of one a minute. They fire sixty 30-caliber shells a minute.

What You Buy With

Every one of the $5,000,000 employed persons in America could easily buy one of these rifles for the army. Not that we need that many, but the reserve could go into shells and other much needed supplies. Designers Ready to Meet Defense Needs

They Help Maintain Women's High Morale.

By CHERRIE NICHOLAS

Under the stress of war conditions a new clothes psychology is developing. Undoubtedly in order to meet the issue successfully, a definite move to create utility clothes for women who are taking up defense work on the farm and in factory is absolutely essential. To this end designers, merchants and manufacturers are bending their combined efforts. At the same time they are bearing in mind the fact that, in order to maintain a high morale, women must keep up their appearance.

Significant is the use of bright colors for spring. It is believed that if women will wear color in their clothes they will express confidence and cheer in their appearance. Women who are not in uniform, but still will be doing active work, will turn to a smart suit for the solution of their problem. Already it is clear to the minds of those preparing for spring that suits, well-tailored and of dependable quality, will play a major role.

Another phase to this insistence on bright color is the advent of eye-appealing collections of gay and lovely prints. Prints never were more attractive in all the seasons that have gone before. Pretty pastel spun rayons and the new crepes and sheer wools, too, are so alluring that women are not waiting for the actual arrival of spring by the calendar but are wearing these colorful, flattering frocks at the moment under their furs and winter cloth coats.

All the resources of American textile industries are being challenged to meet the fashion situation and to fill every functional need. The program ahead includes attractive uniforms of denim and gabardine and the designers are not neglecting apparel for hours of relaxation.

Pinafore

The attractive pinafore frock illustrated above is one of many in the Mary Lewis collections of juvenile fashions. Starched cotton in a flag-bright blue is used for this pinafore, worn over a pretty dot dress with white collar and cuffs. It's a lovely little ensemble destined to prove very popular, from the kindergarten age and right through the grades.

Fads and Fancies

A sporty little gadget for your shirtwaist dresses and sweaters is a lucky charm for lapel or sleeve: It is a heart-shaped pin. A wee glass heart containing a pressed four-leaf clover is placed inside a larger, heart shape formed of braided leather. Knitters, attention! Here's a new idea in scarfs. Called the Lincoln scarf, it is knitted of soft yarn, made long enough to be swathed snugly around the neck and hang in two long ends below the waist. There is a deep pocket at each end, plus a thick handled fringe of the same yarn. These scarfs are approximately 10 inches wide and about three yards long.

Owing to the fact that many metals, plastics and other media have been placed on the priority list, there is a revived interest in "back-to-the-farm" jewelry made of lightweight woods, dyed macaroni, pumpkin seeds, or beans and pods of various types. These colorful novelties are seen at their best serving as vivid color accents on sports and play clothes. Those gay and colorful flower printed squares worn over the head and about the shoulders are greatly enhanced when handled fringe is added. It's an easy matter to fringe your own with gay yarn that picks up a color in the print.

Wade E. Miller, general manager, announced Memorial Day as the official opening day of the 1942 season for Miami Valley Chautauqua. He also said the skating rink, a new structure in 1942, will open on May 23.

An attractive program of speakers, musicians and other features will be offered this season. WLW will broadcast the nine Sunday afternoon programs direct from the Chautauqua platform from 2:30 to 3:30. The first will be June 21 when E. Howard Cadle, famed radio preacher, and Homer Rodeheaver, known for his religious music, open the series. Other talent to be presented on succeeding Sundays are: Dorothy McVitty, victorious vocal contestant; H. I. H. Archibald, Felix of Austria; Phil Spitalny and the All-Girl Orchestra featured on the "Hour of Charm"; Father Flanagan, famous founder of Boys Town; Gregor Ziemer, author of "Education for Death" and authority on Germany under the Nazis; Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese statesman and diplomat; Carroll D. Allott, noted Far Eastern observer; Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price Administration; H. V. Kaltenborn, famed radio news analyst. Cadle and Rodeheaver appeared in the 1941 series and were procured for the 1942 program because of popular demand for their return.

Highway Employees Get First Aid Test

In keeping with the plans laid down by Governor John W. Bricker making available to all State Highway employees the Red Cross First Aid Training Course, Greene County highway personnel received their final examinations at the State Highway garage at Xenia on Tuesday of this week. Examinations were conducted by Walter Fishback, who is in charge of instruction and training for the entire division.

In addition to first aid, the entire staff has been instructed by the State Highway Patrol in the subjects of Communication, Surveillance and Observation, Evacuation from Dangerous Areas and Protecting Scenes for Criminal Evidence.

After examinations, one or two outstanding students will be selected for the Advanced or Instructor's Course. It will be the duty of this group to follow the work already accomplished in training periods and provide for constant practice in practical first aid.

In addition to first aid and other training, the division truck equipment has been adapted to use in evacuation through the construction of ladders and seats.

Famous Theologian Honors President W. S. Kilpatrick

President W. S. Kilpatrick of Cedarville College has been accorded a signal honor. He has just received a letter from Karl Barth of Switzerland, internationally famous theologian, authorizing him to translate into English the Seminar, "The State as a Theological Problem," which was published in German by the University of Basel, July, 1940. Kilpatrick was a student of Barth's at the University of Basel, Switzerland, which included students from more than a dozen other nations.

Karl Barth, native of Switzerland, was called to Germany at the close of the first world war because of his brilliant work in his native land. He taught at the University of Munster, Gottingen, and finally held the most influential chair in all Germany at the University of Bonn, attracting world wide attention. In 1933 he was one of the first intellectuals to be exiled from Germany, his books banned, his honors stripped.

The last two years he has been an outstanding critic of the Nazis although living a stone's throw from the Rhine River from the German frontier in Switzerland.

Barth mailed the letter to Kilpatrick Dec. 24 and the time for its carriage required five months. Ordinarily 10 days would be sufficient.

F. L. Harris To Be Forum Speaker

F. L. Harris, the Roving School Superintendent of Greenfield, Ohio, will be guest speaker at the regular May meeting of the Farm Forum at Geyer's, Monday evening, May 25, at 7:30, when the business and professional men of the county will be the guests of the Forum members.

Mr. Harris has traveled around the world several times and in his address, "On Guard, America!" he makes an analysis of Hitler's propaganda. He has seen and heard Hitler on these different occasions and has observed the way in which his propaganda has been employed in America. Likewise he has devoted some research into the activities of Charles Lindbergh while he was in Europe and has assembled some facts which have not been given wide circulation.

In addition to the address by Mr. Harris, Howard Young, Jr., of Osborn will give an oration on "Airpower and the War". Special musical numbers will be furnished by Ross High School. The program is being arranged by the Ross Township committee composed of Earl Ritenour, chairman and Lester McDorman, co-chairman.

Petitions Out For County Auditor

Petitions were in circulation here this week for James J. Curlett as a candidate for county auditor at the coming primary in August. Mr. Curlett has a wide acquaintance over the county and has a fine record as county auditor.

Sales Tax Declines In Greene County

State Treasurer Don E. Wright issues a statement for the week ending May 9 which shows the sales tax for all counties. Greene showed a gain of $121 over the same week last year. The collections for this year to date over the same period last year shows a loss of $11,594.

Counties that have cities where there is much war activity and government spending show gains. Cuyahoga a gain of $21,000; Hamilton $13,040. The total for the state thus far shows a loss of nearly $600,000. Nearly every rural county shows a loss this year. The loss on automobile sales for the same period was $2,874,000.

Why France?

These who conceived the great mission of the people were spiritually united, holding for the most part an instinctive religious faith based on a profound belief in a great supreme being.

I know of no nation which is as spiritually minded as the French—a nation which has a higher regard for personal spiritual values.

They are highly spiritual but their spirituality is pagan! There is no sense of the great weakness of the French nation. The spiritual life of the great majority of the people had no great commitments such as a vibrant Christian discipline demands.

In consequence there was decline in the moral character necessary to meet such a crisis. Moral character is the essential strength of any people. Character is based upon the conviction that there are some things that one must do whatever it may cost, and some other things which one will not do whatever may come.

Still more important, perhaps, as a fundamental cause of downfall, was the prevalence in many quarters of moral decadence and cynicism. There was a fundamental lack of faith in the processes of democracy to correct existing abuses.

The French system of democracy, unlike the British with its Majesty's opposition and referendum to the people when the Government failed to get a vote of confidence, and unlike our own two party system, with one acting as a corrective of the other, and the one in power secure for four years to work out its program, but held responsible at the end of that time for what it had done—was not constituted in such a way as to provide the French people with the means of assessing moral responsibility.

With some fourteen parties, no one of which was strong enough to maintain itself in power, it was necessary for each group to join a coalition, incorporating small minority groups and governments were able to keep themselves in power only so long as they could maintain, by concession and compromise, the favor and cooperation of these minorities who guarded their majority.

Between elections one government after another would come into power and fall, with sometimes four or five in a single year; and when elections finally came, the situation had become so complicated that it was impossible for the average man to assess responsibility, there was political and moral confusion and in consequence public opinion found itself frustrated.

When moral responsibility cannot be determined, and moral forces brought to bear upon Government or business, abuses are bound to spring up. There was political and moral confusion and public opinion found itself frustrated.

Story of Lenten

There are some things which you cannot touch. There is one thing which war always does.

War destroys values and robs us of our sense of values. It makes us see what counts and just where the real battle-line is—just what is at stake.

The Nazis have been pouring ton after ton of bombs upon the cities and villages of England. Over a thousand churches have been destroyed. The City Temple, London; Court House are gone, places like Old Bailey; libraries are gone—Foster-Moore Row, with 6 million books has been blown out of existence.

But all this has only served to emphasize where the most priceless things lie, for the British people have looked upon these ruined walls and said: "Let their bombs and cannon blast our churches, faith will survive! Let them destroy our liberties, truth will survive."

Let them blow up our House of Parliament, respect for law and order will survive. Let them destroy our school buildings, love of knowledge will survive. The final ramparts of life cannot be taken by Panzer divisions!

Those of us who have lived in France hear the news that has come from across the Atlantic with a certain tightening of our heart strings, as we think of the plight of France today—of her lost battle for liberty. But I can tell you as one who has recently come from there that for thousands in France, that battle is not a lost battle—the battlefield has merely been shifted.

And the struggle for those things which the Creator has put in every human heart, the struggle for justice and liberty and mutual understanding and mutual cooperation and for tolerance, goes on, as it must ever go on—and as I believe it goes on in the hearts of many across the Rhine.

For the French people are realizing anew, that no battle is ever lost until courage is lost. No battle is ever lost until resolution and devotion are lost; no battle is ever lost until the willingness to sacrifice and die is gone from the human heart.

The real frontiers are the frontiers of the human spirit! I. The First Communion (vv. 14-18). Our Lord looked forward with intense desire to the Passover which He now observed with His disciples, for it was the last celebration of that feast foretold by God. All that had foretold of deliverance and hope was fulfilled in Him who now sat at the table. He had moved forward with resolute purpose to this day when His mission on earth was to be accomplished, and He was to become the Christian's Passover lamb (1 Cor. 5:7).

Lake St. Mary's or Grand Lake

Ohioans need not travel afar to find beauty spots or recreation facilities. Ohio's lakes, streams, rivers, parks and wooded areas offer diversified pleasures to the sportsman and vacation seeker. Pictured above is one of such places, Lake St. Mary's, which occupies 25 square miles of water, fifty miles of shore. Tourists from far and wide seek its shores, bays, inlets and marsh lands. Fourteen thousand acres, all fishing waters, islands, pontoons, docks and a lighthouse make Lake St. Mary's a favorite spot for vacationers. Located in Anguilla and Mercer counties, arrived at by State Routes No. 85, No. 88 and No. 127. Many other recreation areas are described in booklet "Enjoy Yourself in Ohio" copy of which may be had by mailing postcard request to Ohio Development and Publicity Commission, Wyandotte Building, Columbus, Ohio.

Washington Letter
savings of between two and three billion dollars in the cost of ordinary functions of government are expected. This does not mean that all non-essential spending will be eliminated. Many of the reductions in appropriations, for which your humble correspondent and others voted, were defeated by narrow margins in the House or Senate. However, the "economy bloc," to which most Ohio Congressmen belong, will continue its efforts to cut all nondefense expenditures to the very bone.
